OSTEOPATHIC OATH

I do hereby affirm my loyalty to the profession I am about to enter.

I will be mindful always of my great responsibility to preserve the health and life of my patients, to retain confidence and respect both as a physician and a friend who will guard their secrets with scrupulous honor and fidelity, to perform faithfully my professional duties, to employ only those recognizable methods of treatment consistent with good judgement and with my skills and ability, keeping in mind always nature's laws and the body's inherent capacity of recovery.

I will be ever vigilant in aiding the general welfare of the community, sustaining its laws and institutions, not engaging in those practices which will in any way bring shame or discredit upon myself or my profession. I will give no deadly drugs to any, though it be asked of me.

I will endeavor to work in accord with my colleagues in a spirit of progressive cooperation, and never by word or by act cast imputations upon them or their rightful practices.

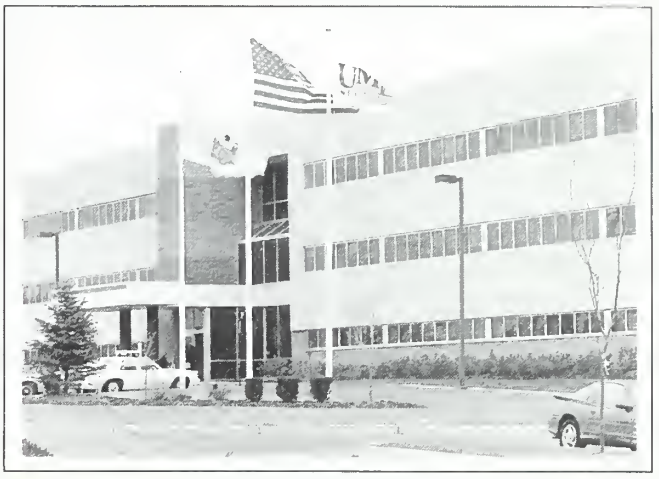

I will look with respect and esteem upon all those who have taught me my art. To my college I will be loyal and strive always for its best interests and for the interests of the students who will come after me. I will ever be alert to adhere to and develop the principals and practices of Osteopathic Medicine and Surgery taught in this college.

In the presence of this gathering I bind myself to my oath.

Dean's Message to the Class of 1995

Frederick J. Humphrey, II, D.O.
Dean
School of Osteopathic Medicine

My congratulations to all members of the UMDNJ-School of Osteopathic Medicine Class of 1995. As have the classes before you, the class of '95 has continued the tradition of outstanding accomplishments that places you among the elite of the graduating osteopathic medical students from across the country. We are very proud of each and every one of you. We also welcome you to our alumni association and trust that you will always consider yourself part of our ever growing family.

We look forward to the 21st Century as an exciting and challenging time for young new physicians. You have learned treatment and prevention modalities unknown to man just a short time ago. As a result of your four years in medical school, you have the skills to carry out the work of the most noble of professions. But medicine, with its daily discoveries, is ever changing. The challenges of conquering such problems as cancer, AIDS, and impairments associated with aging, to name a few, remain before you. Although new technology allows you to practice medicine as never before, always remember that the physician's role is to enrich the quality of life for patients so that life is worth living. By the same token, while exotic drugs make miracles seem commonplace today, remember always that no drug can replace the empathy and healing hands of a well trained, attentive and dedicated physician.

As you enter practice, you will appreciate that you are unique. You are more compre-hensively trained by virtue of being osteopathic physicians than any other health care provider. You have the knowledge and skills to pursue the choices you want in the future while being steeped in the long and proud tradition of a century of osteopathic care giving skills. The work is hard; the rewards great. Our best wishes to you and yours always for health, happiness and success.

MARKS

A woman sits on a bar stool. She is in her early forties but attractive. She wears a plain, black cocktail dress. In every visible part of her body we see blue and red tattoos. The tattoos include twining snakes, demons, flowers birds in flight, etc. The left side of her face is without tattoos but bears a single scar about three inches long below the cheek. She holds and sips a glass of red wine.

ALAIN: Until I was thirty-five there was nothing out of the ordinary, nothing remarkable about my life. My days were very like one of those baroque string quartets. Soothing. Placid. Repetitive. School years without protest or excess. Prom years. Not so much as a single evening's anarchy. My uncle, a Connecticut lawyer, was heard on the eve of my nineteenth birthday to raise a toast which described me, in a positive way he thought, as 'unsurprising.' In college, an unexceptional college, I appreciated. Appreciated music. Appreciated art. I was, if memory serves, a major in a subject whose actual point or content now escapes me, cultural geography. Had I died at that time, perhaps of acute boredom let us say, in the school cafeteria, eating peas, it would have been agreed, by all who knew me that my epitaph should read, 'She did as she was told.' Or blander yet, 'she did as she supposed she might be told.'

I met my husband, Arthur, at a festive tea held to honor the retiring faculty of the Christian Youth Center. He proposed a toast, grapeade I think it was, and we were married two years later after weekly dates shared out among three restaurants of vastly ordinary cuisine. We were, I'm sure, the last of our generation to save ourselves for marriage. We had two children. First a girl then a boy. Two job transfers. Two homes. Two subdivisions. And then on our 15th anniversary Arthur left me, saying I had nothing further to give. I was, he said, unmarked by life.

In the weeks that followed I suffered most because I could not seem to suffer. I became an acolyte to sangria, made brief, nervous forays into singles bars and one evening was walked to my car by a musician who suggested that we make love there in the parking lot, between two yellow lines, as he was, as he so delicately put it, 'between sets.' Well, I resisted, and much annoyed, he cut me here. I stood, horrified and somewhat embarrassed, at sea in the midst of asphalt, staring at drops of blood on my beige shoes. When the scar, this scar, formed I was astounded to find that for the first time people looked at me. Not unkindly, and with interest. And they were not the sort of people that I had known before. Oh no these were interesting people, people who were not unmarked by life. And my mark, my scar, made me in some way approachable; this blemish gave me confidence. And it occurred to me then, or very shortly thereafter, that perhaps it might be best to wear our lives upon our skin. And so I do. This serpent is Muhammed Kastapha, who coiled his life around mine and taught me that there are pressures, and dangers, even a sort of degradation so delightful that it seems ungrateful to resist. This bird in flight, horror-struck, would be my mother. This scythe, the ritual likeness of my musician of the parking lot. This day lily, which blooms, decays and is remembered, is Marian, who instructed me with her death. Taught me with her going. On the palm of my left hand, a crucified Christ, for Brother Shelton, who reached out a hand to save me, he thought, and was repaid with pain. A rising sun for Alex, Charybdis and Scylla, for Jimmy and Cal. An orchid . . . isn't that odd? I know her scent but can't recall her name. They have all marked me. Well, of course, you see that. May I advise you? Please. Let them mark you. Because, you see, the best among us have had so many imprints left upon them that it is like . . . embroidery. And these people, life-engraved, are drawn to each other and pass the time interpreting their signs. And those moments of sharing are the best of life. And this unraveling of hieroglyphs, personally I call it love, lasts only so long as there are marks to read. Then it is gone.

Sometimes the unmarked are attracted to me. They stare . . . briefly. Fascinated and a little frightened. And in the parking lots, I cut them. Make a small mark. (SHE touches her cheek.) Like this. And it is then their lives begin. With a little pain. That is, if there is any understanding in them. You understand me? Yes, I think you do. Salud. (SHE toasts them.)
